

Southern Rural Access Program Autumn 2002 Grantee Conference

September 25-27, 2002

Charleston Marriott Town Center
200 Lee Street East, Charleston, WV

The Autumn Grantee Conference will focus on revolving loan funds, recruitment and retention efforts and communications activities of the eight grantees along with an emphasis on sustainability of projects beyond Robert Wood Johnson Foundation funding. An early bird session will give project directors an opportunity to dialogue with RWJF Senior Program Officer Anne Weiss and NPO staff regarding the idea of developing a single regional forum devoted to rural health care issues in the South.

The Conference is sponsored by the Rural Health Policy Center of the Penn State College of Medicine with grant support from The Robert Wood Johnson Foundation.

Southern Rural Access Program Autumn 2002 Conference

Presenter and Staff Biographical Sketches

JENNIFER B. ALBRIGHT, MPH

PROJECT MANAGER – SRAP EVALUATION TEAM

Jennifer is the project manager for the Southern Rural Access Program evaluation team at The Sheps Center for Health Services Research at The University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill, NC. Prior to joining UNC, Jennifer worked for the other blue, Duke University, managing behavioral research projects in smoking cessation. In 1996 Jennifer moved to the southeast from Seattle, Washington where she was involved with behavioral and cardiovascular research at Group Health Cooperative and the University of Washington. Prior to research, Jennifer's experience included community health centers, family planning and HIV/AIDS. Jennifer completed her graduate work at the University of Washington in health services. Away from work Jennifer enjoys being at home cooking, making art and being entertained by her four cats.

MICHAEL BEACHLER

DIRECTOR

SOUTHERN RURAL ACCESS PROGRAM

Michael Beachler serves as director of the Rural Health Policy Center and associate professor -Department of Family and Community Medicine, Penn State College of Medicine. He also serves as the national program director for The Robert Wood Johnson Foundation's Southern Rural Access Program, an effort to improve access to basic healthcare in eight of the most underserved rural states in the country. Previously, Michael served as a senior program officer for The Robert Wood Johnson Foundation, where he was responsible for developing and overseeing several national grant programs. He also co-chaired the Grantmakers in Health Task Force on Maternal and Child Health and served as convenor of the Foundation's substance abuse goal group. Earlier in his career, he served as assistant deputy commissioner for the Maine Department of Human Services. Michael received his Masters of Public Health from the University of Pittsburgh in 1979. He serves as a member of the Southern Philanthropy Consortium Task Force, an effort that seeks to address the critical lack of charitable capital in rural areas of the Southeast. He has recently been appointed to the Board of Directors of Capital Link, a national technical assistance center to improve access to capital for community health centers and the Community Health Facilities Fund, a national intermediary designed to improve access to capital for not-for-profit behavioral health providers.

JOHN BONDS

PLANNING COORDINATOR

NEW HAMPSHIRE OFFICE OF HEALTH PLANNING AND MEDICAID

John Bonds serves in the Office of Health Planning and Medicaid as Planning Coordinator and is responsible for supporting the Office's data needs. In this capacity he also serves as the Department's liaison to the Children's Alliance of New Hampshire School Readiness Indicators effort and chairs the Data Subcommittee for the Governor's Kids Cabinet. His major concerns are in assuring that planning and policy decisions, especially at the local level, are based on timely and appropriate data and analyses. John has considerable experience in data collection and management, primary healthcare and rural health from his prior position as assistant director for planning in the former Division of Public Health Services. He co-developed an application for the five-year Robert Wood Johnson Foundation Practice Sights grant and served as the grant's manager. He was instrumental in establishing the Community Health Institute and the Primary Care Recruitment and Retention initiative at the Bi-State Primary Care Association. John earned his BA in Political Science at American International College (Springfield, MA) and his MA in Political Science at UNH.

MARSHA BROUSSARD, MPH

PROGRAM DIRECTOR

LOUISIANA RURAL HEALTH ACCESS PROGRAM

As a member of the LSU Department of Public Health and Preventive Medicine, Marsha Broussard, MPH currently serves as program director for the Louisiana Rural Health Access Program (LRHAP). The program assists rural communities throughout Louisiana with improving access to preventive and primary health care services. On behalf of LRHAP Broussard also worked to create a grantee partnership with the Southeast Louisiana Area Health Education Center (SELAHEC) to coordinate the Health Resource Service Administration's Mississippi Delta Network Development Grant program. Known in Louisiana as the "Better Health for the Delta Program" the program integrates the Delta and the LRHAP programs to make the best use of these community capacity building resources. Broussard has extensive public health experience in developing primary care and maternal and child health services and programs. She was instrumental in the development and funding of the first two primary care networks in the state, the EXCEL network in New Orleans and the Bayou Teche Community Health Network in St. Mary Parish. From 1992-1998 Broussard served as executive director of the Great Expectations/Healthy Start program in New Orleans. Great Expectations, one of the seven initial Healthy Start programs in the country, was credited by the national evaluation as being the second most successful program nationwide, reducing infant mortality by 37%. Broussard also directed the Louisiana Primary Care Association for several years and assisted several underserved communities in their efforts to develop federally qualified health centers.

JANE C. CALLAHAN, MA

PROJECT MANAGER – FIGHTING BACK PROJECT

Jane Callahan is the project manager for the City of Vallejo's "Fighting Back" project. She is the past coordinator of the Children's Network of Solano County, one of the oldest and broadest models of interagency coordination of children's services in California. Her background is in legislative advocacy, childcare, juvenile justice, child abuse prevention, children's mental health and substance abuse prevention. She earned a BA in English and Child Development and an MA in Education. Jane is a resident of Sacramento, CA.

CHRISTOPHER CONLEYCHIEF EXECUTIVE OFFICER, COMMUNITY HEALTH FACILITIES FUND

Christopher Conley is chief executive officer for the Community Health Facilities Fund (CHFF, a 501©(3) organization established to assist small, unrated borrowers providing behavioral care services with capital formation through the tax-exempt bond market. Founded in 1991 by the National Council for Community Behavioral Healthcare and the International Association of Psychosocial Rehabilitation Services, CHFF is funded by a Program Related Investment from The Robert Wood Johnson Foundation. Prior to assuming his position with CHFF, Conley was a senior vice president with Tucker Anthony, where he led the municipal bond securitization effort. Previously, he was senior vice president of the Health Care Group in the Public Finance Department at Lehman Brothers in New York. Conley has served as investment banker on several billion dollars of financing for health care institutions, and has financed multi-hospital systems academic medical centers, rural hospitals, nursing homes, and medical office buildings, using all forms of credit enhancement and all types of financing structures. Before joining Lehman Brothers Conley was a consultant with the Health Care Group in Booz, Allen & Hamilton's New York office, where he was involved with strategic planning studies, financial feasibility studies, and organizational planning studies for multi-hospital systems, academic medical centers, and community hospitals. Conley received a Bachelor of Arts from the University of Notre Dame and his Master of Health Administration from Duke University.

ROSLYN FERRELL, MHAPROJECT DIRECTOR – SOUTH CAROLINA RURAL HEALTH ACCESS PROGRAM

Roslyn Ferrell is the project director of the South Carolina Rural Health Access Program (SCRHAP). She was born and raised in New York City just down the street from the world famous Apollo Theater. She received her undergraduate degree from Hunter College in New York City where she majored in Food Service Management. After working over 10 years in that industry she relocated to South Carolina to obtain her masters degree in Health Administration from the Medical University of South Carolina (MUSC). She was one of 10 students in the US awarded the W.K. Kellogg Foundation Rural Health Administration Fellowship. She has worked for the South Carolina State Office of Rural Health (SC SORH) for over three years, two of those years in her current capacity. Prior to directing SCRHAP, she was the senior project coordinator for another SC State Office of Rural Health grant entitled, Low Country Healthy Start.

SUSAN FRIEDRICH, MBAHEALTHCARE CONSULTANT

Susan Friedrich has over 17 years of experience consulting to healthcare organizations including hospitals, community health centers, healthcare for the homeless programs, family planning agencies, health departments, primary care and specialty groups, HMOs, women's health, school-based clinics, federal and state agencies, ministries of health, social services agencies and home health agencies. Her areas of expertise include operational efficiency, practice management, managed care, community needs assessment, network development, systems integration, evaluation and market research. In 1995, Friedrich was contracted by the New Hampshire Department of Health and Human Services to serve as executive director of the Community Health Institute (CHI). With a start-up grant from The Robert Wood Johnson Foundation's Practice Sights Initiative and the New Hampshire

Department of Health and Human Services, the CHI was established to provide technical assistance and other support services to health and social service providers in New Hampshire. Under Friedrich's leadership, the CHI was established as a respected, successful organization that supports 13 full time staff and is fully sustaining. Friedrich received her MBA from Boston University's Graduate School of Management in Health Care Administration and her BA degree from Amherst College.

STEVEN FUMICH, MSW PROGRAM MANAGER

WEST VIRGINIA RECRUITABLE COMMUNITIES PROJECT

Steven joined the Recruitable Communities Project as program manager in August 2002. He recently earned his masters in Social Work from West Virginia University (WVU). He also has a BSW and certificate in gerontology from WVU. His past experience includes work with the West Virginia Rural Health Education Partnership/Extension Service initiative as program director of the recycled medical equipment program in the Beckley area.

ALVIN HARRION RECRUITER ADMINISTRATOR - MARC

Alvin Harrion is the Recruiter Administrator for the Mississippi Access for Rural Care Program (MARC) in Jackson, MS. He has been involved with the recruitment component for three years. During that time, MARC has been successful in recruiting several primary care providers including dentists, nurse practitioners and family practitioners. In addition, Mississippi now has a state loan repayment program and a scholarship program for family medicine physicians. Harrion, a graduate of Jackson State University with a bachelor's of science degree, is currently working on a master's degree in public health. Harrion's other recruitment experiences include Lockheed Martin, IMS, MS Department of Human Services and the Hinds County Board of Supervisors.

CURTIS E. HOLLOMAN
DEPUTY DIRECTOR
RURAL HEALTH POLICY CENTER/PENN STATE COLLEGE OF MEDICINE

Curtis E. Holloman is deputy director of the Rural Health Policy Center at the Penn State College of Medicine in Hershey, PA. He is also a faculty member within the Department of Family and Community Medicine. In this capacity, he assist with the management and administration of the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation's Southern Rural Access Program and the 21st Century Challenge Fund matching grant program. These efforts focus on improving access to healthcare in eight of the nation's most medically underserved Southern states. The Rural Health Policy Center provides technical assistance and direction for twenty-seven grantees. Before joining this National Program Office of the Foundation, Mr. Holloman was the public health director for two county health departments in rural North Carolina. In that role, he was responsible for delivering an array of primary and public health services. He was part of developing services that addressed the need for comprehensive perinatal health services. He led a local Healthy Carolinians initiative that organized the community to assess its health status and develop strategic plans to improve local health conditions. In addition, he was appointed by the governor to serve as a member of the state's Healthy Carolinians Coalition. The Coalition's efforts led to favorable policy decisions and changes that affected rural and underserved individuals. Other areas of focus included restructuring and privatizing public home health services, addressing access to dental health services, immunization outreach, and community health education.

CRYSTAL L. HULL

COMMUNICATIONS MANAGER

RURAL HEALTH POLICY CENTER/PENN STATE COLLEGE OF MEDICINE

As Communications Manager for the Rural Health Policy Center, Ms Hull provides technical assistance and consultation services to the grantees of the Southern Rural Access Program on behalf of their overall communications effort. Assistance is provided in the areas of media relations, media training, event planning, marketing communications, development of printed materials and public relations. She also serves as a liaison with the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation Communications staff. Previously, Ms Hull spent over six years working in state government, most recently as communications director and legislative liaison for the State Civil Service Commission and as press secretary and director of communications for the state Insurance Department and 15 years prior as the assistant director of the Governor's Heritage Affairs Advisory Commission. She also spent eight years managing a wide range of public relations activities for a health care delivery system in Central Pennsylvania. Her experience includes managing a proactive and reactive media relations program; the promotion of inpatient, outpatient and other subsidiary services, plus physician communications and family practice resident and physician recruitment. She is an accredited business communicator through the International Association of Business Communicators (IABC) where she has served as an accreditation program written test evaluator and proctor.

GINGER THOMPSON MCDANIEL
COMMUNICATIONS DIRECTOR
CENTER FOR RURAL HEALTH DEVELOPMENT

A former journalist, Ginger Thompson McDaniel began her career as a public relations practitioner in 1994 when she joined an advertising agency that specialized in health care clients. She worked as a communications specialist for West Virginia's largest private health insurer, as well as a marketing specialist for a large hospital system before joining the Center for Rural Health Development as its communications director in 2000. A 1987 graduate of the University of Charleston with a degree in mass communications, she was a reporter for the Charleston Daily Mail in Charleston, WV and the Valley News Dispatch in Tarentum, PA.

ALAN T. MCKENZIE
CHIEF EXECUTIVE OFFICER
BUNCOMBE COUNTY MEDICAL SOCIETY CORPORATION

Alan T. McKenzie has served as chief executive officer of the Buncombe County Medical Society Corporation, an 800+ member association of physicians in the Asheville, NC area, since January 1995. In addition to managing the Medical Society, McKenzie also directs the Medical Society's charitable foundation, its political action committee and its endowment.

As director of the Society's charitable foundation he manages the BCMS Project Access charity care system that provides over $4 million of free physician care and $2.5 million in free hospital care each year to low-income uninsured patients. Since 1996, McKenzie has helped dozens of communities of all sizes adopt the Asheville/Buncombe Project Access model to their unique circumstances by assisting these communities secure and sustain private physician participation. He helps communities create sustainable community-based financing by leveraging system outcomes and documented return on investments to secure financial resources and long term commitments from partners.

To better organize this work with communities, McKenzie and partner communities across the country united to form the American Project Access Network. APAN is dedicated to promoting continuous improvement and sustainability of established project access systems. It also assists communities with the implementation of project access type systems of care. Prior to his association with the Buncombe County Medical Society, McKenzie was on the staff of the North Carolina Medical Society in Raleigh where his duties included responsibility for state-level legislative initiatives regarding complex healthcare issues such as peer review and indigent care. He is originally from Pinehurst, NC.
